

Where Do I Start?

This resource was developed as an avenue to begin to learn more about a range of topics (e.g. whiteness, colorblind racism, experiences of POC in higher ed) and social justice issues.

The readings listed below are not meant to be exhaustive nor comprehensive. Rather, these articles and book suggestions are selected to be one avenue for individuals to learn more about a particular topic. The Table of Contents divides the articles by various theme. These are not precise divisions, but one method to discover information about a specific keyword or phrase more easily.

Please note that this list primarily features articles from popular culture, blogs, and news sites. Academic texts and films/documentaries are also included with some entries. I focused mainly on non-academic texts (including works of public intellectuals) to ensure accessibility to all materials for those interested in learning more. Often access to journal articles, for example, is restricted to those who have academic affiliations.

For those interested in adoption specific materials, please visit:

<https://mckeekimberly.com/resources/>.

For those interested in additional academic texts or more information about academic texts listed, please email me at mckeeki [at] gvsu.edu.

If you have suggestions for sources or believe a source is erroneously listed, please email Kimberly McKee (mckeeki [at] gvsu.edu) subject line: "Where Do I Start?"

Final note, the resources are not listed in any particular order.

This list was last updated on: April 21, 2017
